The New Reality: Current Legal Issues in Fact-Based Programming

Legal issues arising out of fact based programming were once of concern primarily to lawyers representing the news media. Today, those issues cut a far broader swath through the entertainment and media businesses. The explosion of reality programming, the continued popularity of docudramas, and the proliferation of celebrity-driven journalism combine with more traditional news reporting to make an understanding of these kinds of issues a must for any lawyer practicing in the entertainment or media fields. The New Reality will examine current and developing legal issues arising from all kinds of fact-based programming in three panels composed of leading experts in the field.
